Bound in Venice : The Serene Republic and the Dawn of the ...

Bound in Venice transports the reader to a time when books were just beginning to be created. Book sellers and publishers flocked to Venice, the cultural and trade center of the early 16th century. Here they made there wares and stacked them unbound onto their shelves. Binding would come later and could cost as much as the pages that filled them.

The Serene Republic and the Dawn of the Book. A highly readable but erudite book in the style of Alberto Angela's A Day in the Life of Ancient Rome, this is the compelling story of fifteenth-century Venice, at that time the mercantile and cultural capital of the world. There, the first genuine publishing houses open for business leading to an explosion of the written word and an unprecedented diffusion of human knowledge.
