In summary, Bridges writes: “A transition concludes when something new emerges from your own inner neutral zone, something around which you can build your new life. What emerges is not a new job—which would be a change—but some new sense of yourself, some new reality you’re dealing with, some new idea reader to understand the difference between 'change' and 'transition', and ultimately, to appreciate that the ending of a chapter is the actual beginning of a new one.

Transitions: Making Sense of Life's Changes by William Bridges

In the broadest sense, we might say this time is one of “searching for a place” and that the transitions likely to take place involve experimenting with an eye to making commitments. Charlotte Buhler noted that physical dependence on parents ended by the late teens, and commitments that were long lasting were not made until almost thirty.

In Transitions. Making Sense of Life's Changes, Bridges first clarifies the distinction between change and transition, stating that our society confuses them constantly. He writes that change is one's move to a new city, their shift to a new job, the birth of a baby, or the death of a loved one. In other words, change is situational.

Life becomes more volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous, humanity's capability to navigate transition becomes even more important. Bridge's concept of a "neutral zone" in the middle of transitions is powerful: benefitting from that zone in the midst of the angst which transition usually brings is an immensely helpful approach with longlasting personal and broader impact.

Purpose ...

"Transitions" made so much sense. We need time out, an interval, in which to quietly acknowledge what is past, whether it's a marriage, a job, or a home town, a time to simply be. I declared an intown vacation, didn't answer the phone, did no work and, to my amazement, finally met "me."
